THE INDESTRUCTIBLE RECORD COMPANY

ALBANY, NEW YORK, U.S.A.

-----History-----

This Company was organized under the laws of Maine, U.S.A., in July 1906, and commenced recording in 1907 with the issue of two-minute cylinders. Four-minute cylinders were produced in January 1910, and continued to early 1922, taking in such dance orchestras as as Nicholas Orlando's, The Happy Six, and The Dance Symphonists.

MAY

The British series was started in 1910 for the two-minute records, and Sept. 1910 for the four-minute. The American recording was done at Albany, New York, with John Lacalle as Musical Director, and the British at the premises of John G. Murdoch & Co., Ltd., at 91-93 Farringdon Road, London, this under the able baton of Albert W. Ketelby. The London recordings were sent to Albany for processing. This enabled the parent company to adjudicate as to whether the subject might be suitable for the American market, in which case it was given an American as well as a British number. This explains why certain recordings are duplicated in both the American and British listings.

From the outset the Company steered a middle course between the giants of the industry, Thomas B. Lambert patents were used, and the date of the operative one, that of W. F. Messer, i.e. July 1902, was clearly impressed on every record manufactured. It was closely associated with the mighty Columbia, who from 1908 acted as agents, providing Columbia boxes for that purpose. This direct help was withdrawn in 1912 when Columbia ceased handling all cylinders. An interesting fact has emerged: in 1920-1921 Columbia issued a few discs by the Happy Six Dance Orchestra, and at about the same time this Band recorded for Indestructible cylinders. So far as is known, the Company did not manufacture machines, but for the purpose of playing their records on existing machines, a tension reproducer with a diamond point was introduced. With characteristic honesty the Company stressed in their advertisements that these reproducers were not suitable for playing wax cylinders.

In 1913 the Company purchased a few masters from the dying U.S. Everlasting Company. These cylinders, although bearing the matrix number of the recording company, are all re-numbered into series. After 1917 the Company changed its name to Federal; Sears, Roebuck, the mail-order house also acted as agents, and distributed these cylinders under the name "Oxford", using the parent numbering with the prefix 5-. However some records have been found with the prefix 4-, and it is assumed to refer to those marketed by Montgomery Ward, who used this number on the Edison two-minute waxes they were licenced to sell.

Dedication

Firstly, to all my customers, without whose support of previous catalogues, the encouragement would have been missing.

Secondly, to the Officers and Members of the City of London Phonograph and Cramophone Society, both here and overseas, who always spread a friendly wing over it all.

Acknowledgements

From America Peter Betz and his co-helper B. Odell, who between them expended much energy to complete the American listing. Jim Walsh of Vinton, the celebrated columnist, for a mass of detail and some additional recording dates.

In England George Frow, whose assistance with composers' names and which was which of the two Van Tilzers, was much appreciated. THE HILLANDALE NEWS on whom fell the onerous task of printing and publishing; to all these folk, my valued friends, I tender my grateful thanks.

H. H. Annand.

TWO-MINUTE AMERICAN ISSUES

Numbering It seems that at the outset, the Company toyed with a block system. This did not last long, and numbers 472-663 appear to be the only ones affected. Earlier block numbers cannot at present be traced. The four-minute series and British two and four-minute series were unaffected.

End of British four-minute records

Compiler's note: Despite a world-wide search, I still cannot trace numbers 7082, 7084 and 7091. In the American list are two obvious British recordings which might account for two of them, 3167 - Selection from "The Chocolate Soldier", and no. 3170 Dances from Nell Gwyn. If any Member can assist with these, I shall be grateful.
